How to Fold a Six-Point Snowflake

Real snowflakes have six points, so fold your paper into six (then in half)

---

1. Start with a square

Cut a 21 cm (8 in) square from a sheet of A4 or letter paper. Thin paper folds and cuts most easily.

2. Fold corner to corner

Fold the square in half diagonally to make a triangle. The middle of the long folded edge is your centre point.

3. Fold into thirds

From the centre point, fold the right side over, then the left side over the top, so the three sections sit evenly.

4. Fold in half again

Fold the narrow wedge in half lengthways. Trim the top straight across if the layers are uneven.

5. Trace and cut

Lay a pattern from page 3 on top, point to the centre point. Trace it, cut away the grey parts, then unfold gently.

Love making things from printables?

Paper snowflakes look lovely tucked into a junk journal, on a gift tag or across a winter page. If you like having a stack of fresh printables to cut and play with, that is what my Artsydee Creation Club is for. New printable junk journal kits land there every month, with papers, ephemera, tags and pockets, ready to print.
